

AsianDate's Latest Success Story Shows How Love Conquers All in Online Dating

AsianDate shares more success stories of international online dating from across the globe.

AsianDate is one of the leading online dating websites that is used by single men who are looking for the perfect Asian companion and now they are sharing more successful love stories that have come to be thanks to their portal.

This story is about the happy couple Ralph and Xiumei who met on the AsianDate website. This love story serves as great inspiration for those still looking for real love on the Asian dating site. Ralph is from Canada and was interested in exploring the chance of finding himself an Asian partner so he began searching outside Canada.

He met Xiumei Deng on AsianDate.com while going through the many profiles of single women from China. It was the summer of 2013 that turned out to be lucky for Ralph as he connected with Xiumei for the first time in June of 2013. They began meeting online almost daily to chat in real time using the portals features like LiveChat and CamShare.

Ralph decided to use the Call Me feature so he could hear the voice of his interest. His experience was made a lot simpler by the translator service the provided by the portal. The couple exchanged personal information and then used emails, the chat and phone, all thanks to the help of communication services made available by AsianDate. The quality dating site helped bring their hearts together and that eventually lead to a face-to-face meeting.

Ralph visited Xiumei's home town in China five times and the new culture with its rich traditions left a great impression on him. This couple has shown that a language barrier is not an obstacle when it comes to online dating someone who lives on the other side of the world.

Ralph and Xiumei decided to share their love story with AsianDate to show all other potential couples that finding true love online IS possible.

